Wetting Our Sexual Appetites, Pt. 2

A week ago, we began addressing the subject of female ejaculation, due to the high volume of e-mails and inquiries of late (coupled with the fact we've been enjoying the benefits of "squirting" for a number of years). To refresh, female ejaculation is (probably the most intense) orgasm achievable, in which fluids are expelled from the urethra along with the usual mind and body elation. In our case, the climax is so powerful that Alicia needs several moments to collect her self before continuing any sexual activity, whatsoever.

So how does one hit the heights of female ejaculation? All it takes are the right tools, emotional readiness, and a healthy dose of trust – both in one's self and her partner.

Tools

To trigger an ejaculatory response, pressure on the inside wall of the vagina (just beyond the entrance) is necessary. At its most basic, a finger or two can get the job done. Simply insert (well lubricated) said digits into the vagina and curl the fingers into a "come hither" motion, pressing on the wall and probing to find a slight bumpy texture. Provide firm pressure to the area, which will cause her to feel the need to urinate and you're almost there (more about the pee response later).

Unfortunately, fatigue will usually set in before reaching the necessary level of stimulation, so we suggest acquiring an appropriate device to give your fingers a rest. Look for a dildo or vibrator with an upturned shape, such as an Njoy Pure Wand, Fun Factory Patchy Paul, or properly shaped glass dildo. In our case, we also add clitoral stimulation via any number of vibrators, such as the Eroscillator, Pocket Rocket, or B-Naughty bullet to create the proper splash. Keep in mind that every body is different, so you may have to experiment a bit to find the right size and shape to trigger the desired response, which is the urge to urinate.

Emotional Readiness

In our experience, we've encountered countless women who've never experienced an orgasm of any kind – let alone ejaculation. The reasons are as varied as physical ailments to parental abuse to bad lovers to problems with self-esteem and beyond. Given these factors, it's important to realize that until one is open to pleasure, one will not experience pleasure. It may shock people to know that we were married for ten years before Alicia hit her first bona fide climax. Indeed, we've heard cases where women have gone their entire lives without a single "Big O." Until a woman is comfortable in her own skin, so to speak, the odds of experiencing an ejaculatory climax are slim to none. This being the case, we highly recommend practicing female masturbation (force yourself no matter how uncomfortable it is at first) to learn about and discover where your pleasure centers lay. Men, do your part and demonstrate what you've been doing since puberty to help them along!

Trust

The third, and most important, factor in a squirting orgasm is the knowledge that, no matter how intense, powerful, or strange the feelings you (she) will encounter, everything will be alright. From the concerns about soiling the sheets to the total loss of control as her body expels its wonderful fluids, the results will be in the end satisfying and deeply profound. Men, if you want her to reach this high point of ecstasy, it is vital that you accept and embrace every aspect of her experience. If the thought of liquid flowing from her vagina (or spraying all over you, as in our case) turns you off, stop reading now and continue having ordinary sex.

If the thought drives you crazy with desire, however, tune in next week...

Summer is in full swing, with our son playing basketball at Mar Vista Park, while learning to surf (along with mommy!) down at the Venice break water. Though Alicia has yet to make it to her feet, our son popped up on only his second try and has been progressing faster than we ever could've imagined. We've stocked up on cool gear from Rock'er Board Shop just up the street and will keep at it until our dream of family surf trips becomes a reality. We also took possession of our cool 1985 27-foot Tioga motor home in preparation for Burning Man and might venture out for a couple of short trips up and down the coast to get used to driving it and camping in general.
